Set in a delightfully secluded position in its own extensive estate, Quantock Lodge provides the ideal venue for a wide variety of functions, meetings, training courses and houseparties.

We offer a warm welcome amid these tranquil surroundings where you can escape from the pressures of modern living. You can hear the birds sing and sometimes glimpse the deer roaming close by.

In the main house, the Italian Suite offers three large inter-connecting reception rooms. These stunning rooms with their large brass chandeliers, decorative plasterwork ceilings and woodwork, look out on to the formal gardens and parkland beyond. Room settings can be arranged to suit the special needs of your group.

Further rooms provide space for seminars, TV, snooker or just relaxing.

Our aim is to provide you with a unique and memorable occasion.

The formal gardens surrounding the house also contain splendid architecture, offering a superb backdrop for photography. Beyond this, the grounds, containing many spectacular plantings of rhododendron and azaleas, blend and merge with the Quantock Hills. From our doorstep, a network of paths leads through forestry to open moorland above, with breathtaking views. The Hills were the first Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty to be designated in this country.

An excellent range of modern accommodation supports the main house including a large commercial kitchen and sporting facilities. We can comfortably cater for up to 130 residents and more as non-residents.

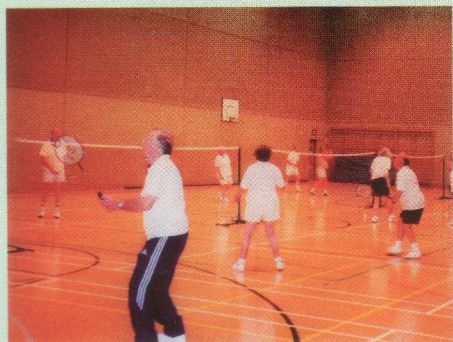

Meals are taken in the spacious dining room and a selection of menus using fresh local produce wherever possible can be chosen to suit your requirements.

Visitors wishing to explore the area will find plenty of places of interest locally, with the sea, Exmoor, Brendon, Blackdown and Mendip Hills all within easy reach.
